Stephen Glassborow

The 2 of Us

Through the action of construction and deconstruction Stephen Glassborow transposes the reality of a sculpture, creating an object rather than a subject. By cutting into the figure and adding bold colours to what is usually a dark medium, Stephen Glassborow objectifies the sculpture and creates his own unique, contemporary look.

“Bronze sculpture has a long tradition and the figure has been used for thousands of years, because of this I knew I had to find my own take on it. For me, the Art Deco period was the foundation for inspiration. Running parallel to that are ideas that spring from photographic imagery, fashion and robotics. Somewhere, ideas develop and grow, but always around the figure. ”

Born in Hammersmith England, Stephen served his apprenticeship as a Sculpture student at Newcastle upon Tyne and at Brighton College in the United Kingdom before moving to Australia as a young professional sculptor in the early 1980s. He has since attracted considerable interest and many commissions throughout Australia, and in Asia.

In his work, Glassborow relies heavily on traditional classical precedents and careful anatomical observation. Nevertheless, he manages to temper his respect for figurative precision with a refined elegance and beauty,.

Stephen uses whimsy, abstraction and colour to bring a unique and engaging energy to his work. Glassborow’s attitude towards bronze kicks against the mainstream. The apparent levity of his pieces belies his determination to bring a fresh perspective to an ancient art form. By playing with words and toying with gravity, Glassborow converts ideas into three dimensional trapeze acts.
